(4x3=12)

SUGGESTIVE RESPONSE

- I. The young seagull pretended to fall asleep on the brink of the ledge because he was afraid to fly. He hoped that by pretending to be asleep, his family would not notice his fear and would stop pressuring him to take flight.
- II. Lencho's family also supported him. Because all family members have full faith on God and Lencho's determination.
- III. The poet contrasts the tiger in the zoo as a sad, confined creature, pacing back and forth restlessly, with the tiger in the forest as a powerful, free animal moving confidently in its natural habitat, stalking prey and enjoying its freedom.
- IV. No, the relationship between the writer's family and the baker was more than just commercial. It was a social and emotional connection. The baker was an important figure in the Goan village life, and his visits were eagerly anticipated. His presence was associated with celebrations, festivities, and memories of childhood, making the relationship much deeper than a mere business transaction.
- V. The pirate in "The Tale of Custard the Dragon" is described as a fierce and menacing figure. He had a black beard, wore a pistol in each hand, and carried a cutlass (a type of sword). He was portrayed as a typical, fearsome pirate, intending to cause harm, but Custard the Dragon defeated him in the end.

- I. Valli's Character Traits in "Madam Rides the Bus"

Valli, the young protagonist of "Madam Rides the Bus," learns a lot from her surroundings due to her curiosity, independence, and keen observation. Her natural inquisitiveness leads her to explore the world beyond her village, and her determination helps her plan and execute the bus ride without anyone's assistance. Valli's ability to notice details, such as the beauty of the countryside and the behavior of passengers, shows her perceptive nature. She observes, listens, and absorbs life lessons from her experiences, such as understanding life and death when she sees the dead cow. These traits allow her to learn and grow from her surroundings.

II

In "Nelson Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom," courage is portrayed through Mandela's resilience in the face of immense adversity. His willingness to fight against apartheid, despite the risk of imprisonment and persecution, showcases his deep moral strength. Mandela's courage stems from his commitment to justice, which ultimately leads to the liberation of his people.

In "The Black Aeroplane," the pilot demonstrates courage by navigating through a dangerous storm, trusting an unknown guide to lead him to safety. His bravery is shown through his calmness under pressure, despite the uncertain outcome.

Both characters' courage reveals their inner strength and determination. Mandela's struggle is a long, arduous fight for freedom, while the pilot's challenge is more immediate but equally perilous. Their achievements—Mandela's triumph over apartheid and the pilot's safe landing—highlight the importance of perseverance and faith in the face of fear.

11. Answer any one of the following two questions, in about 100-120 words. (1x6=6)

Expression 2

Accuracy 1

Bholi's Triumph Over Destiny

In "Bholi" by K.A. Abbas, destiny had indeed been cruel to Bholi. She was born into a conservative society, faced physical and emotional setbacks, and was ridiculed for her stammering and appearance. Yet, Bholi's inner strength and determination helped her rise above her circumstances. Education became her means of empowerment, and with the support of her teacher, she gained self-confidence. When her prospective groom attempted to exploit her vulnerability, Bholi courageously refused to marry him, choosing dignity over social expectations. Her boldness to reject societal norms and stand up for herself reflects her remarkable journey from a timid, overlooked girl to a self-assured woman.

I. "Contentment is a Great Wealth" in "The Necklace"

Matilda, the protagonist of "The Necklace" by Guy de Maupassant, embodies discontent. She is unhappy with her modest life and constantly yearns for wealth and luxury. However, her desire to appear rich at a party leads her to borrow a necklace, which she later loses, causing her and her husband to plunge into years of hardship. Ironically, the necklace turns out to be fake, teaching Matilda a hard lesson: her vanity and lack of contentment led to unnecessary suffering. The story highlights the value of contentment, showing that true wealth lies not in material possessions but in appreciating what one has.
