Read the passage given below and answer the question that follow:-*12 Marks

- 1 When I learned that my 71-year old mother was playing scrabble against herself, I knew I had to do something. “Who’s playing?” I asked one when I saw a half-finished game on the table. “My right hand versus my left.” “Excuse me”, I said, “well, your father doesn’t play, and I want to keep my mind sharp.” An admirable pursuit, but I questioned whether my mother/s solitary version of Scrabble would achieved that goal. My husband suggested me to give her computer to play against. I wasn’t sure my mother was ready for a cyber-Scrabble. It had taken 15 years to persuade her to buy a microwave. Nevertheless, we packed up our old PC, complete with Scrabble and word-processing programmes, and delivered it to my parents’ home. And so began my mother’s adventure in the world of computers.
- 2 It also marked the beginning of an unusual teaching assignment for me. I’ve taught children and adults of all ages, but never thought. I would be teaching my mother to do anything. Despite the look of horror on her face when she first saw our gift, my mother was eager to get started. She sat mesmerized as the screen lit up and the various icons presented themselves. Slowly, but surely, my mother caught on, making notes in a little spiral book. I wondered how she’d fare without me. But thereafter, she only spoke on her game on the computer to me. She even forgot to ask her stock question. “When did you have for supper?” It was no longer on the agenda. Instead, she talked about RAM, ROM and the CPU- terms spilled out effortlessly from her mouth. My mother had acquired a new mother tongue.
- 3 My mother isn’t the only one experiencing a personal-growth spurt. Thanks to the computer, my father has finally overcome his phone allergy. For as long as I can remember, any time I called, my mother would answer. Then, a couple of months ago, I heard dad’s gruff voice on the phone. “Why did not mum answer?” I asked.” She’s on the computer. “My father and I have had more phone conversation in the last two months than we’ve had in the previous 20 years. After a lifetime of being her child, I was finally the one with knowledge to share with my mum. But even now, I realize that she continues to teach me, I’m learning that no matter how old you are, a willing spirit is capable of anything.

- 1 To reach Chhota Mollakhali in East Sunderbans, you have to sail Miles through dense mangroves, Surrounded by thick forest on the three sides, Chhota Mollakhali is the most neglected part of the famous world heritage site of the Sunderbans, Its population of 18,000 has no electricity, no transport or even the basic medical facilities. What it does have now though is the School of Hope, the first pucca structure constructed in April this year. An initiative of the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), the School of Hope has over 600 students who have been provided school uniforms and books. The school is helping the villagers in ways beyond educating its children. As there is no electricity at home, the building is lit by solar-powered bulbs so the children can study in the compound. What the electricity has also done is go some distance to remove the possibility of encounters between the villagers and the other resident of the Sunderbans-the magnificent Royal Bengal Tiger. Known for its frequent intrusions earlier, it has not been sighted near the village for the past five years thanks to WWF interventions. The brightly lit school is another step in the WWF's multi-pronged approach to securing environment for men and beast.
- 2 "People here either depend on wood smuggling or prawn seed collection for livelihood. The first encroaches on tiger territory while the second completely disrupts ecological balance of the area, because the salinity of the water is affected due to excessive prawn seed poaching", says Kakoli Banerjee, assistant coordinator of the Sunderbans landscaping project, WWF, Villagers have lost limbs and lives to crocodile attacks when venturing into deep waters. WWF has also provided the village with tillers, which have increased crop production area from 10 to 20 acres, solar-powered spice grinding machines, deep tube wells and medicinal plant gardens for sustenance. Children here have now formed nature clubs; over 14 of them have been formed in two years, instead of going to the forest to pick wood. It is now the children who teach the parents the importance of saving the tiger. To save the environment, you have to understand it first, like Chhota Mollakhli seems to have done.
