3. Write the correct question number and part thereof in your answer sheet

4. Adhere to the prescribed word limit while answering the questions.

SECTION A – READING (22MARKS)

Q 1. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow:

1. Since time immemorial, there have been numerous apprehensions whenever some technology has entered the education system. The discussions held at the inception of using calculators, computers, etc. in the past are examples of it. But it is evident that these assistive technologies have enhanced our capabilities disparately and everyone in the education system has adapted them as suited to their respective needs. Undoubtedly, harnessing technology in education might affect cognitive abilities in various ways, which should be taken care of to protect human capacity and prevent servitude to these technologies.
2. Now, it is the turn of Artificial Intelligence (AI) entering education. The fast-pervading internet and technological advances are making the intrusion of AI in education electable. Consequently, AI literacy is becoming inevitable for everyone in the present digital age. However, the students must embrace it to further their competencies, but with a reasonable understanding of how AI operates, what help you can get from it? and what are its limitations? This calls for the setting up of a robust AI literacy framework for emphasizing knowledge about AI, recognizing AI, thinking abilities of AI-driven systems, socio-ethical considerations in tandem with AI, and the role of human beings in creating AI-driven systems.

3. A systemic approach is required to educate the masses through the young students who are part of the education system about what AI is and how it works. Earlier will be better because, in the absence of awareness, people perceive AI-assisted decision-making and other digital interventions as miracles. The search engines helping the user in fetching the results from the search query and subsequently populating the screens with content similar to the one queried earlier is due to the prevalence of AI effect in search engines. Simultaneously, the young generation should be encouraged to get involved in constantly growing AI innovations to become developers of AI tools, software, and applications and get engaged in further research in these domains.
4. In this regard, scientific literacy, technological literacy, and computational literacy are inevitable so that AI literacy can be carried forward effectively in the education system and informally in society. A reference to Alan Turing, a mathematician and computer scientist who stated in 1950, “Can machines think?” becomes relevant for all those engaged in AI. This premise led to the erudite community’s work towards invigorating machines to perform intelligent functions resembling human actuated functions. This ultimately relied upon training machines adequately with requisite patterns, behaviours, and some attributes of human intelligence such as learning, reasoning, problem-solving, language interaction, etc. Thus, the possibility of AI-based tools to imitate human intelligence without involving human judgment could be accompanied by certain ethical challenges and risks in society.
5. Moving steps forward, apparently, generative AI has started impacting teaching, learning, assessment, and governance in education across the world. Let us try to understand how each of these is affected. AI interventions in teaching are empowering teachers to enrich their deliverable content. The focused search and facilitation to assimilate the content using AI can vitalize teachers provided suitable filters are applied to ensure its correctness and relevance.

Answer the following questions, based on the passage above.

i) What is the primary purpose of early education about Artificial Intelligence (AI) in today's digital age? (1)

- a) To discourage engagement with AI technologies
- b) To instill fear of AI-driven advancements
- c) To promote reliance solely on human capabilities
- d) To foster informed engagement and understanding of AI

ii) What are some potential impacts of integrating Artificial Intelligence (AI) into education? (1)

- a) Personalized and enriched content delivery
- b) Limited teacher empowerment
- c) Decreased access to information
- d) Stagnation in content

iii) Why is the development of AI literacy crucial for individuals in the education system? (1)

- a) To discourage engagement with AI technologies
 - b) To promote blind reliance on AI-driven tools
 - c) To understand AI's mechanisms, capabilities, and ethical implications
 - d) To limit access to AI-driven innovations
- iv) What are some historical examples of technologies entering the education system, and how have they impacted teaching and learning? (2)

Q. 2) Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

(10 Marks)

WHY ONE MUST READ

‘Books are the quietest and most constant of friends; they are the most accessible and wisest of counsellors, and the most patient of teachers’. -Charles W. Elio -

Reading can be a fun and imaginative time for children, which opens doors to all kinds of new worlds for them. Between the pages of a book, they are transported to another world and become immersed in the lives of fictional characters.

Studies suggest that children who read for enjoyment every day not only perform better in reading tests than those who do not, but also develop a broader vocabulary, experience a range of emotions, and acquire skills and knowledge while developing a better understanding of other cultures, entirely different from their own. This acquired background knowledge is then used to make sense of what they see, hear, and read which aids their cognitive development.

“...Stories, told and read, are the fuel that propels young minds and bodies into action, enriching the material children use as they develop their thinking and their language - speech, reading and writing.” [Dr Carole Bloch, director of the Project for the Study of Alternative Education in South Africa]

When children read books, they are involved with the characters in the story. This enables them to recognise the feelings of the characters, as they experience the lives that they lead in the story. They can then use their understanding to empathise with the people they meet in day-to-day life, and at the same time get to understand their own emotions as well. This paves way for better social development and stronger interpersonal skills.

Books are the best way to travel the world and experience things differently. Children read about people, places, and events. This gives them a deeper understanding of the world around them and cultures that are different from their own

Reading regularly and consistently helps to improve children's concentration. Moreover, it is highly beneficial since it helps children develop the habit of sitting still and engaging in reading activities. This will go a long way in their performance at school.

To sum up, the more children read the more impactful it will be to help to accelerate their creative and critical thinking skills and evolve into better and more informed individuals.
