2.	c) Civil Disobedience movement	1
3.	a) To restore a sense of pride in traditional culture and national identity.	1
4.	a) Wrote on the caste system in India	1
5A.	The First World War worsened India's economic conditions with increased taxes, war loans, forced recruitment, and crop failures, leading to hardship and anger. Politically, the war fostered nationalist sentiment as Indians expected concessions for their sacrifices, which fuelled the growth of nationalist movements.	2
5B.	Indians reacted with nationwide anger and sorrow to the Jallianwala Bagh massacre. Protests spread across the country, Rabindranath Tagore renounced his knighthood, and the incident united Indians against colonial oppression, intensifying the freedom movement.	2
6A.	The most powerful "weapon" of Spanish conquerors was disease, particularly smallpox, because it devastated indigenous American populations who had no immunity, drastically reducing their numbers and weakening their resistance to the Spanish invasion. This biological warfare, a consequence of Europeans' longer exposure to these germs, decimated communities before large-scale battles even took place, making conquest significantly easier.	3
6B.	New crops can have a transformative effect on survival and well-being, as evidenced by the introduction of crops like potatoes and maize to Europe from the Americas. These crops provided essential nutrients and increased food security, leading to population growth and improved health outcomes. In Africa, the adoption of cassava and sweet potatoes has helped combat famine and malnutrition in various regions. Additionally, the diversification of crops can enhance resilience against climate change and economic fluctuations, ensuring that communities can sustain themselves even in challenging conditions. The historical and contemporary examples demonstrate that the introduction of new crops is crucial for enhancing food systems and improving the quality of life for populations worldwide.	3
7A.	The development of nationalism did not come about only through wars and territorial expansion. Culture played an important role in creating the idea of the nation: art and poetry, stories and music helped express and shape nationalist feelings. 1. Romantic artists and poets generally criticised the glorification of reason and science and focused instead on emotions, intuition and mystical feelings. Their effort was to create a sense of a shared collective heritage, a common cultural past, as the basis of a nation. 2. Romantics such as the German philosopher Johann Gottfried Herder (1744- 1803) claimed that true German culture was to be discovered among the common people – das volk. It was through folk songs, folk poetry and folk dances that the true spirit of the nation (volksgeist) was popularised. So collecting and recording these forms of folk culture was essential to the project of nation-building. 3. The emphasis on vernacular language and the collection of local folklore was not just to recover an ancient national spirit, but also to carry the modern nationalist	5

	message to large audiences who were mostly illiterate. This was especially so in the case of Poland, which had been partitioned at the end of the eighteenth century by the Great Powers – Russia, Prussia and Austria. 4. Even though Poland no longer existed as an independent territory, national feelings were kept alive through music and language. Karol Kurpinski, for example, celebrated the national struggle through his operas and music, turning folk dances like the polonaise and mazurka into nationalist symbols. 5. Language too played an important role in developing nationalist sentiments. After the Russian occupation, the Polish language was forced out of schools and the Russian language was imposed everywhere. In 1831, an armed rebellion against Russian rule took place which was ultimately crushed. Following this, many members of the clergy in Poland began to use language as a weapon of national resistance. Polish was used for Church gatherings and all religious instruction. As a result, a large number of priests and bishops were put in jail or sent to Siberia by the Russian authorities as punishment for their refusal to preach in Russian. The use of Polish came to be seen as a symbol of the struggle against Russian dominance. (Any other relevant points)
7B.	After the defeat of Napoleon in 1815, European governments were driven by a spirit of conservatism. The representatives of the four great European powers – Britain, Russia, Prussia and Austria who had collectively defeated Napoleon, met at Vienna to draw up a settlement for Europe. The Congress was hosted by the Austrian Chancellor Duke Metternich. The result was the Treaty of Vienna of 1815. 1. Its object was to undo the changes that had come about in Europe during the Napoleonic wars and to restore the monarchies that had been overthrown by Napoleon and create a new conservative order in Europe. Conservatives believed that established, traditional institutions of state and society – like the monarchy, the Church, social hierarchies, property, and the family – should be preserved. 2. The Bourbon dynasty, (deposed during the French Revolution) was restored to power. France lost the territories it had annexed under Napoleon. 3. A series of states were set up on the boundaries of France to prevent it from expansion in future. For example, kingdom of the Netherlands, which included Belgium, was set up in the north. Genoa was added to Piedmont in the south. 4. Prussia was given territories on its western frontiers. Austria was given control of northern Italy. The German confederation of 39 states set up by Napoleon was left untouched. 5. In the east, Russia was given part of Poland while Prussia was given a portion of Saxony. The main intention was to restore the monarchies that had been overthrown by Napoleon and create a new conservative order in Europe.	5

17B.	In ancient India, people developed wide-ranging techniques to harvest rainwater. • In mountainous areas ‘Guls’ and ‘Kuls’ the diversion channels were built for agriculture. • ‘Rooftop rainwater harvesting’ was commonly practised to store drinking water, especially in Rajasthan. • Inundation channels for irrigation were developed in the flood plains of West Bengal. • In arid and semi-arid regions, agricultural fields were converted into rainfed storage structures, eg. ‘Khadins’ in Jaisalmer and ‘Johads’ in other parts of Rajasthan. • In semi-arid and arid regions of Rajasthan, particularly in Bikaner, Phalodi and Barmer, all the houses had underground tanks or ‘tankas’ built inside the house for storing drinking water. They were a part of the well-developed rooftop rainwater harvesting system.
18.	18.1) (i) Millets have high nutritional value. (ii) They are rainfed, hardly need any irrigation facilities and hence can be grown in arid and semi-arid regions. (iii) Millets do not require a lot of investment to flourish which can help them be great commercial grain substitutes in poorer nations. This is why CSA expert suggested to increase the production and consumption of millets in India. (Any one relevant point)	1

24.	1. Democracy ensures that decision-making will be based on norms and procedures. So, a citizen, who wants to know if a decision was taken through the correct procedures, can find out as democracy guarantees to the citizens the right and the means to examine the process of decision-making. 2. In a democracy people have the right to choose their rulers and people will have control over them. Whenever possible and necessary, citizens should be able to participate in decision-making that affects them all. Thus, it ensures transparency by producing a government that is accountable to the citizens and is responsive to their needs and expectations. 3. It is right to expect democracy to produce a government that follows procedures and is accountable to people. To do so, the democratic government develops mechanisms for citizens—regular, free and fair elections, open public debate on major policies and legislations and citizens' right to information about the government and its functioning. (Any two reasons)	2
25.	Shruti's search results reflect a societal sexual division of labor, where teaching is associated with women due to its nurturing role and piloting with men due to its technical and authoritative nature, reinforcing gender stereotypes. These outcomes illustrate how society assigns certain professions based on gender, influencing career choices and limiting opportunities for individuals by perpetuating these traditional perceptions through the data that search algorithms are trained on and the patterns in user searches	2
26.	Political parties in India face challenges such as lack of internal democracy, dynastic succession, and money and muscle power. Lack of Internal Democracy: Many parties lack transparent processes for decision-making, with power concentrated among a few leaders, limiting opportunities for ordinary members. Dynastic Succession: Leadership in many parties is often inherited within families, discouraging merit-based leadership and reducing democratic participation within parties. Money and Muscle Power: The increasing role of money and criminal elements in elections undermines fair competition, as parties rely on financial influence and coercion to win votes. 27A.	Reasons for success of federalism in India are:	5

	- Clearly laid out Constitutional Provisions providing a three-fold distribution of powers in the three lists—Union List, State List and Concurrent List—between the Union Government and State Governments. - The nature of democratic politics in our country which ensures that the spirit of federalism, respect for diversity and desire for living together became a shared ideal. - The creation of linguistic states. Boundaries of several old states of India were changed in order to create new states. This was done to ensure that people who spoke the same language lived in the same state. Later some states were created to recognise differences based on culture, ethnicity or geography. For example: Nagaland, Uttarakhand, Jharkhand, Telangana, etc. - Restricting Centre-State relations. The constitutional arrangements for sharing power work depending on how the ruling parties and leaders follow these arrangements. For a long time, the same party ruled both at the Centre and in most of states. Post-1990 saw the rise of regional parties. Since no single party got a clear majority in the Lok Sabha, the national parties had to enter into an alliance which led to a new culture of power sharing and respect for autonomy of State Governments.
27B.	Major steps towards decentralisation taken in 1992 are: - Now it is constitutionally mandatory to hold regular elections to Local Government bodies. - Seats are reserved in elected bodies for scheduled castes, scheduled tribes and other backward classes (OBCs). - At least one-third of all positions are reserved for women. - The State Election Commission was created to conduct Panchayat and Municipal elections. - The State Governments are required to share some powers and revenue with Local Government bodies.
28.1	Communal politics is based on the idea that religion is the principal basis of social community. Communalism involves thinking along the following lines. The followers of a particular religion. Their fundamental interests are the same. Any difference that they may have is irrelevant or trivial for community life must belong to one community.	1
28.2	- The Constitution provides to all individuals and communities freedom to profess, practice and propagate any religion, or not to follow any. - The Constitution prohibits discrimination on grounds of religion. - At the same time, the Constitution allows the state to intervene in the matters of religion in order to ensure equality within religious communities. For example, it bans untouchability.	2
28.3	India as a country don't have any state religion it follows the principle of secularism.	1

	• People set their goals according to the changing circumstances and the prevailing situation. • People may change the goal with the change in situation which could be contradictory to the previous goal • For example: A person willing to do higher education will change his goal to go for employment because of the weak economic situation of the family.
36.	The RBI ensures the stability and efficiency of the banking system. Explanation: • Monetary policy formulation: The RBI controls money supply and interest rates through policies like repo rate, influencing credit availability and economic stability. • Regulation and supervision: It sets guidelines for banks, ensuring safe lending practices, capital adequacy, and consumer protection. • Financial inclusion: The RBI promotes schemes like priority sector lending, ensuring banks provide credit to agriculture, small industries, and weaker sections.	3
37.	The factors that have enabled globalisation in India include: • Information Technology (IT): IT has significantly boosted service production. • Technological Improvements: Over the past 50 years, advancements in technology, such as the use of containers for transportation, have reduced costs and increased market reach. • Transportation Advances: Rapid improvements in transportation have made long-distance shipping cheaper and faster. • Government Policies: The Indian government has removed previous trade barriers, facilitating easier import and export of goods and services.	3
38A	Tertiary sector in India has been growing rapidly for a number of reasons: (i) In a developing country, the government has to take the responsibility for the provision of basic services for example, hospitals, educational institutions, post and telegraph services, police stations, courts, village administrative offices, municipal corporations, defence, transport, banks, insurance companies, etc. (ii) The development of agriculture and industry leads to the development of services, such as trade, transport, storage, etc. Greater the development of the primary and secondary sectors, more would be the demand for such services. (iii) As income levels rise, certain sections of people start demanding many more services, such as eating out, tourism, shopping, private hospitals; private schools, professional at training, etc. This change was quite sharp in cities, especially in big cities. (iv) Over the past decade or so, certain new services, such as those based on information and communication technology have become important and essential. (v) Government policy of privatisation has also led to growth of this sector. (vi) A large number of workers are engaged in services, such as small shopkeepers, repair persons, transport persons, etc. (vii) However, the entire sector has not grown. Large numbers of people engaged as construction workers, maids, peons, small shopkeepers, etc. do not find any change in their life. OR	5
38B	In the organised sector: • Rules and regulations (labour laws) as proposed by the government are followed. • Formal processes and procedures are followed. • Security of employment to workers, who are employed for full time is ensured. Working hours fixed, overtime is paid for extra hours of work. • Workers get benefits like provident fund, gratuity, medical benefits, paid leave, etc. In the unorganised sector:

	• Outside the control of the government laws. • Small and scattered units. • Rules and regulations are not followed. • Low-paid and irregular jobs. • High degree of insecurity. • No provision for overtime, paid leave, holidays, etc.
